		Institutes adhere to the university-recommended

Teaching Learning Process :	curriculum in a structured way. The university provides an tentative calendar for each semester with the start and end dates. The institute compiles an academic calendar with dates for internal exams and events based on the university's provision of a tentative schedule for each semester. This enables institutions to alter their curriculum throughout the time frame given if needed. This helps institutes to stay on track with the university's curriculum and ensure that students are able to complete it within the set deadlines. The institute also plans and establishes the internal examination criteria and distributes the subjects in accordance with the preferences of the faculty. The number of lectures needed, individual activities, and teaching plans for each unit are all planned out by the faculty. Institutions use a Parent Teacher Student System to monitor student information. This system enables communication and progress tracking between parents, teachers, and students. By hosting competitions, expert discussions, industrial visits, and the signing of LOIs and MOUs with businesses, institutes also help to bridge the gap between the worlds of academia and industry. Student's preparation for their careers is enhanced by this exposure to the real world.
